Reading, PA, February 2011 – Landis Company, a turnkey third party logistics provider based in Reading, Pennsylvania, has rolled out a brand new system for warehouse management aimed at providing even more visibility and processing capabilities to both the company and their clients. Leveraging the advanced CoreWarehouse Management System (WMS), Landis can seamlessly handle the complexities of their customer’s programs with real-time tracking of all day-to-day operations.

“Core’s web-enabled processing gives real-time insight into all warehouse operations and inventory availability, allowing us to provide instantaneous information on a program, including inventory levels, order history, transactions, shipping status and more,” explains Ken Kowal, Landis’ Director of New Business Development. “Our account managers can closely monitor a customer’s stock and notify them immediately when it’s time to replenish, allowing more time for manufacturing runs, packaging and shipping.”

Landis’ CoreWarehouse Management System also allows clients to have 24/7 access to their accounts, 365 days a year, from any location via a browser, WAP device or Palm device. The event- and activity-triggered reports interface is easy to retrieve and lets customer view their most up to date order statuses, inventory levels and more.

“With web-enabled communications we can keep the exchange of information open with clients, while further streamlining our programs to run at maximum efficiency,” says Robert Tompkins, President and CEO of Landis. “We’re excited to bring a new level of value-adding service to our clients through Core WMS.”

Landis’ end-to-end supply chain capabilities include fully integrated distribution, warehousing and fulfillment programs for small and mid-size businesses across the Mid-Atlantic region.
